Hensarling Statement on the Paulson Plan Failing in the House

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Congressman Jeb Hensarling (R-TX), Chairman of the House Republican Study Committee, today issued the following statement after the House rejected the Paulson plan for financial markets:

“I have made clear from the beginning that the Paulson plan had fundamental flaws that were unacceptable to taxpayers, and should not have been the only alternative considered by this Congress.

Speaker Pelosi and Democrats and the house are the governing majority in the House, and they have a responsibility to keep the House working to solve this problem. Inaction is not an option, and House conservatives stand ready to stay here for as long as it takes to do this right. There are other alternatives that the Republican Study Committee and other have offered that must now be discussed and considered as we move forward and work to solve this crisis in a way supported by the American people.”
